Who are you in your relationship with stuff?

THE SPACE GIVER

May or may not have "extra" to give, but will still give up her extra space
Has a hard time saying no and puts others before herself
Doesn't have the space she needs any longer because she has given it away
The relationship is with the owners, not the things.

THE MEMORY KEEPER

Nostalgic/sentimental by nature
Experiences guilt when getting rid of items
Fears the memory will not live on without the items
The relationship is not with the item but with the memory it brings.

THE MONEY MINDED

Very cost conscious and has a hard time spending money
Puts a value on everything
Always looking for a good deal
The relationship is with the money spent, not with the item.

THE JUST-IN-CASER

Planner by nature and doesn't like to be caught empty-handed
The neighbor everyone can depend on
Will buy for future events that may never happen
The relationship is circumstantial only; there is no connection to the item.

THE ACQUIRER

Agreeable, kindhearted, generous, sympathetic and kind to others
Likes the thrill of the hunt - she finds shopping fun, exciting and rewarding
Stays up on current events and trends / Tends to have multiple "collections"
There is no relationship with the item, it is about the thrill of the hunt.

THE CRAMMER-JAMMER-STACKER

Highly intelligent multi-tasker who cares what others think of her
Organize through cramming, jamming, or stacking things anywhere there is space
No apparent organizational system in place
The relationship with this stuff becomes burdensome.

THE ASPIRER

Has lots of interests and passions and is a creative multi-tasker
Is holding onto the past while dreaming of the future
Has great intentions
The relationship is with the idea, not the reality, of what could be or what was.
